herald

Herald, in a paragraph

Herald is a calm, private journal for people with epilepsy, on iPhone, iPad, Apple Watch, Mac and Apple Vision Pro. People log a seizure in one tap, check in each day, keep track of their medications, and start a heads-up that tells the people they choose. Herald describes what they logged, never diagnoses, and collects nothing: there's no account, and the log stays on their devices and, sealed, in their own iCloud.

The facts

Name	Herald for Epilepsy (Herald on the Home Screen)
Made by	Done Marketing, Inc., a California corporation
Devices	iPhone, iPad, Apple Watch, Mac and Apple Vision Pro
Languages	English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Dutch, Portuguese and Norwegian
Price	Free, with Herald Plus inside
Privacy	Data Not Collected, on the App Store's label
Website	heraldjournal.app

What Herald does

- Log in a moment. A seizure, an aura or a note in one tap, from the iPhone, the Apple Watch, the Action button or Siri. Details can wait.
- A calm daily record. Three taps for sleep, stress and energy, medications with reminders, and sleep from Apple Health.
- A heads-up you start. The people you choose see it at once, with what helps and your plan. Herald never detects seizures and never calls anyone.
- History and Patterns. Every entry with its time, and what the days show, in plain words.
- A report for appointments, as a PDF or a spreadsheet, shared only by the person who made it.

Who makes Herald

Herald is made by Done Marketing, Inc., a California corporation. It's built for people who live with epilepsy, whether they log seizures or keep a quiet daily record, and for the people who support them.

Press questions

Write to support@heraldjournal.app with "Press" in the subject.

In this kit

The logo in three colours · The app icon · iPhone, iPad, Mac and Apple Watch screenshots · The App Store header art · This fact sheet

Herald is a journal, not a medical device and not an emergency service. Apple, the Apple logo, iPhone, iPad, Apple Watch, Mac and Apple Vision Pro are trademarks of Apple Inc., registered in the U.S. and other countries. App Store is a service mark of Apple Inc.